Book of Asters Sally Rosen Kindred

The poems in Kindred's second full-length collection look to daisies, goldenrods, sunflowers, ironweeds — all the members of the family asteraceae, or aster family of flowers — to explore family and memory, and to search the tender edges of marriage, infertility, and motherhood. Like the children in Noon on Gravel Drive setting a leaf on fire, these poems circle in/ for dance or witness upon a neighborhood of mothers and fathers, daughters and sons, but also haunted alders, dolls and feathers, Sirens and mean angels. Kindred uses the language of flowers to reveal a rich terrain of survival and desire, inviting the reader to delight in its complex and beautiful images.
