Excerpt from Letters From the Frontiers: Written During a Period of Thirty Years' Service, in the Army of the United States

The following Letters, published in compliance with the expressed desire of those valued friends for whose eyes alone they were originally intended, are taken, chiefly, either from copies retained by the writer at the time, or from the originals which have recently been placed in his hands by those to whom they were addressed. Many of them, embracing perhaps the longest and those written with most care, have been copied verbatim under his own eye. Some have been docked of their redundancy, trimmed into shape, and redressed so far as was requisite in preparing for the press letters written Gurrente calamo, and comprising subjects of various descriptions, as well personal as of a general character. Others may be said to have been re-written, always, however, preserving strictly the outline and main features of the subject, and the facts and incidents by which it was sought to be illustrated. One or two were written for publication, and appeared in the journals of the day; they are here introduced unaltered. Many are mere extracts. Two or three incidents only are related which did not pass under the writer's own eye; these were communicated directly by officers or character, who were themselves eye-witnesses, and they are so noticed where introduced.
