Dawn Hooley

As America was watching with horror the events that were unfolding after Hurricane Katrina, there was a special group of people inside the city of New Orleans that shouldn't have been there, but couldn't leave. This group has not been represented on the news, in the media or even in print. The very same group the state of Louisiana and New Orleans usually courts for their money. A group that had no options when faced with the threat of a hurricane but to vertically evacuate. This group is THE TOURISTS. Dawn and Alan Hooley bring a unique perspective to the events preceding, and witnessed the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, as part of the tourists who ended up trapped in the bowled city. They were white, they had money, and it didn't matter. (It wasn't about race.) Delta canceled their flight leaving them stranded for days after the hurricane and were then rescued by wonderful, resourceful employees of the Marriott Corporation. Have you wondered what was going on inside the city of New Orleans? Have you wondered why people didn't evacuate? Have you thought about what you would do in this situation? Have you wondered why there was a clear picture on television and in the newspapers, yet no resources were given to those who were stranded? Have you wondered what really happened and who is to blame? Read the rest of this compelling, and up until now, untold story. Dawn and Alan's long time love story began in New Orleans. As their love affair with the city continued, it was supposed to be celebrated during this special vacation. Read about their personal history with each other with New Orleans, their experience getting caught in Katrina, the aftermath, their assignment of blame and their commentary on how this never would have happened in their home state of Florida. You deserve to know the truth as it was experienced.
